London, December 9.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland, and a Mail from France.

Naples, November 21.

SI G. Vicentini is arrived here in the Quality of the Pope's Nuncio, and has been received with particular Marks of Honour by the Nobility and Clergy. It is said the Differences between the Courts of Vienna and Rome which have been depending for some time about the admitting of a Nuncio, were removed by the Pope's consenting, that for the future no Ecclesiastical Benefices in this Kingdom shall be given but to the Natives; that no more Pensions shall be assigned on them by the Court of Rome, and that the Emperor shall have Power to levy the Tenth Part of all the Ecclesiastical Revenues for supporting the War in Sicily. One of our Gallies has brought Advice from Sicily, that the Duke de Monteleone is arrived at Messina, and has made his publick Entry there in the Quality of Viceroy of that Kingdom.

Stockholm, Nov. 29. On the 27th in the Evening arrived here M. Burmania, Ambassadour of the States General. His Excellency had Yesterday a private Audience of the Hereditary Prince of Hesse Cassel, by whom he was received with particular Marks of Honour. He is soon to have Audience of the Queen.

Vienna, Dec. 2. On the 29th past an Express arrived from the Hague with the Convention concluded there between the Ministers of the Emperor, Great-Britain, and France, for allowing to Spain three Months longer to accept the Terms of the Quadruple Alliance, to reckon from the 18th of November, N. S. It is said the Emperor has resolved to take into his Service six or eight Regiments of some other Princes, to put in Execution the Laws of the Empire against some Roman-Catholick Princes, upon the pressing Instances made by the Protestants, whose friendly Interposition as well as the Emperor's Exhortation have hitherto proved ineffectual.

Paris, Dec. 8. We hear from Nantes in Britany, that the Royal Court of Justice have begun their Sessions, and secured several suspected Persons. M. Vattand, Procurator General of the said Court, opened the Sessions with the following Speech:

Gentlemen,

I Bring with me the Letters Patents for establishing a Royal Court of Justice in this Town, by which his Majesty has been pleased to appoint you to hold it. The Object of it is of equal Importance both for the Support of the Royal Authority, and the Welfare of one of the principal Provinces of the Kingdom. You cannot but with Astonishment read in it the weighty Motives which at this time arm the Power of Justice; Plots against the Government, riotous Meetings of Gentlemen, Associations between them, Projects of Treaties with a Foreign Power, Opposition made by Force of Arms against the gathering of the Royal Revenue; All which are Practices injurious to the Prince, pernicious even to the Authors of such Attempts, and absolutely contrary to the true Interest of their Fellow Subjects.

It was in vain that the august and wise Trustee of absolute Power endeavoured to signalize his Regency by Mansuetude and Goodness; to quash Troubles and Division in the Bud by Indulgence and Mercy, and to gain over by Profuseness of Bounty and Favour, intractable Subjects, whom he had a Right to subdue by Authority and Force: In this Province, Gentlemen, and in some neighbouring Parts, unruly Spirits have been found, fond of Innovations, and far from concurring with the rest of the Members of this great State, in cherishing the fair Prospect of a happy Tranquility arising from the prudent Care and indefatigable Endeavours of the Prince Regent. An Instance of what has been seen at all Times, and among all Nations, and now in our Days we experience, to our sorrow, viz. that Kindnesses only work upon noble Souls, and Minds truly virtuous, but on the contrary serve but to add to the Temerity of ill-affected Persons the Character of Ingratitude and Baseness.

However, the Prince by relying on you, Gentlemen, for vindicating his wounded Authority, sufficiently shews, that he has rather in view the publick Interest than his own Resentment; and the Letters of Commission which I bring with me, will be a perpetual Testimony of the Wisdom and Moderation of my Lord the Regent, who being always slow to punish, and even when all seems to call for Vengeance, is averse to signal Chastisements, the Instruments of Arbitrary Power, which at the long Run prove fatal even to Innocence it self: His Intentions are that Conviction shall precede the Punishment he is to inflict, by delivering up a few that are guilty, to the Rigour of a Fate they have but too well deserved: He endeavours to pluck up by the Roots those Evils that might spread and infect a whole People; in short, Gentlemen, if Examples must be made, he demands no other than such as are just and useful. But who would ever doubt of the Integrity and Honesty of his Intentions, when it shall be known that he has chosen Magistrates so worthy to be, as it were, associated to him for executing a great Enterprize, and to share with him the Praise of it? But more than that, he will deserve the Approbation and Applause of the most remote Foreign Nations, which are as well acquainted as we of the eminent Qualities of the Head that presides over you, and which on so many Occasions have paid to his Virtues the just Tribute of their Admiration and Praise.

Being all animated by the same Spirit, and particularly engaged by your Commissions to labour for the King's Glory, and the Good of the Kingdom, which are inseparable; you are going, Gentlemen, to make Justice reign in this Province, and by it the Sovereign will reign here; you are going to make his Authority known here, and to teach how to respect it; and at the same time that you will fill the Minds of some seditious and rebellious Gentlemen with Anxiety and Terror, you will secure the Repose and Tranquility of a People, whose Fidelity, Heaven be thanked, is unattainted, and above any Suspicion.
